FRENCH DOORS

Increased natural light

With a wide variety of styles and colour options a french door can provide your home with a continental feel. They can be used to offer easy access to your garden or as an elegant partition leading into your conservatory or extension.

When you have an opening that is too wide for a conventional entrance door but too narrow for sliding patio doors then French doors may be the answer.

French doors are designed to allow more natural light through, often with glass extending from top to bottom. This will give your room a much brighter and more spacious feel.

Increased security

All Tricept french doors are fitted with matching handles to both doors and include the same multi point locks as fitted to single doors with additional shoot bolts to the slave door.

This user friendly operation provides increased strength, stability and security to both doors.

Room with a view

Sliding patio doors offer you full natural light and a pleasant 'room with a view' feel.

They are especially ideal for rooms restricted in size or space with the doors sliding horizontally.

For this reason they are commonly used as a partition between a house and conservatory as well as the more traditional use providing access to a garden or patio area.

Superb performance

The Tricept slimline patio door slides smoothly on stainless steel rollers. Aluminium inter-lockers with additional woolpile provide advanced weather protection, whilst optional trickle vents are available particularly in areas where further ventilation is required.

Security all round

You can feel comfortable and secure with the many security features of Tricept patio doors which include 4 opposing hook locks, anti-lift device, strengthened aluminium inter-lock section and internal/external locking facility.
